

Clinically vulnerable staff and children

- Staff and children who are clinically vulnerable or have underlying health conditions but are not clinically extremely vulnerable, should continue to attend school in line with current guidance.

Clinically extremely vulnerable – children

Most children originally identified as clinically extremely vulnerable are no longer identified as such and therefore should attend school as normal. If you are unclear, parents should speak to their GP or specialist clinician, as soon as possible, if you have not already done so, to understand whether your child should still be classed as clinically extremely vulnerable. Where a meeting with a GP or specialist clinician has not taken place, the public health advice is that the child is still clinically extremely vulnerable and should not attend school.

In addition:

- Children whose doctors have confirmed they are still clinically extremely vulnerable are advised not to attend education whilst the national restrictions are in place. Appropriate arrangements for remote education will be made if you contact the school to make them aware.
- Children who live with someone who is clinically extremely vulnerable, but who are not clinically extremely vulnerable themselves, should still attend education.
